Joe and I became friends at an early age, he being 9 and I being 10 1/2. We both loved cars and we used to climb the fence at the new car lots when the new model years came in. Before we were old enough to drive, we used to race his grandfather's 1962 Chevy Suburban in the 40 car garage of the coop that we lived in seeing who could get closer to the garage door to sharpen our driving skills. We never did do any damage surprisingly.

Two of the owners in the co-op made deals with us. We would wash and wax their cars and they would let us have them to go on dates. We were thrilled to be riding around in a '62 Red Plymouth Fury and a new '65 Ford Thunderbird.

Those days and our friendship were indelibly etched in my memory.

RIP my friend
