“ Another birthday for Sy. I somehow feel better remembering my father on his birthday. It seems right. I will share something that happened to me this year. It is a recurring theme. I had a dream that was so realistic I couldn't differentiate it from reality. That is rare for me. I had news about a new project and I was so excited to share it with him and somehow in the dream he was alive so I woke with a start and reached for the phone to call him and I then realized that I couldn't. I believe he visited me in my dream life. I hope he is in a place where he can feel unconditional love and warmth. Even though he is not here with us. He lives inside of us. Rest in peace dear father. God bless you.

“ I can't believe it's been four years since dad's passing. I think of him often especially when something significant happens in my life. Sometimes I forget for a split second that he is gone. I wish he was here to see my older kids in college and my, almost, three year old, growing by the day. He would have loved him so much. I miss you every day and hope that you are somewhere peaceful. I love you dad. Your son, Seth

“ We are writing these memories with enormous sadness and gratitude for knowing Sy. He was a delightful man and had many friends at Symphony of Delray. We shared weekly dinners with Joe and Leni Geremia and Sy and Ellen where laughter was always a constant. Sy had a quick but subtle sense of humor that we all loved. He was well versed in multiple areas and his conversations were always interesting and meaningful. We always ended with a “love you” and see you next week. He became our family. We will treasure every moment we had with him and will miss him terribly. He was a gentle, wonderful man who is now dining at our blessed Lord’s table.

Loved and missed.
